

Additional Quotes from Partners

1. Mr Vincent Tan, President of Restaurant Association of Singapore (RAS)

“We are excited about the Adapt & Grow Food Services and Retail Day. This is a good opportunity for the F&B industry to showcase its dynamism, and also to clear the doubts of people who are keen to work in the industry, but unfamiliar about its workings. We hope that job seekers can take this chance to understand the different sides of working in the F&B industry and give serious considerations to be a part of us.”

2. Mr Tan Jek Min, Director, Asian Culinary Institute (ACI)

“The Adapt & Grow Food Services and Retail Day is a good platform that offers the public insights into the different employment opportunities in these 2 industries. For food services, aspiring and existing chefs can now tap the newly launched Skills Framework for Food Services to guide them on the skills and competencies they need to build a career in food services. Industry players are also not left out as they will also gain exposure to new technology and initiatives that will help enhance productivity in their operations.”

3. Megan Ong, Director, Singapore Institute of Retail Studies (SIRS)

“The Adapt & Grow Food Services and Retail Day offers an excellent showcase of the dynamic retail industry and a concentrated touch point to experience new age retail; one that is tech-enabled, experiential, integrated and omni-channel. It offers a whole new world of opportunities, both for the retailers and job seekers. As the industry evolves at a speed never before, it is imperative that enterprises and workforce be armed with new skills, knowledge & industry intelligence to meet business needs. To this end, the Skills Framework for Retail that is just launched provides the guide and more. SIRS is privileged to play a key role to support both companies and individuals navigate the changing landscape, adopt productive solutions and level up skills competency of the workforce in this industry transformation journey.”